Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Thanksgiving Sermon on the Perpetuity of the Union of the United States This is a picture of a happy condition of society, the effect of a righteous government, peace, order, harmony, every where, the result of good laws, and of popular confidence in the integrity and uprightness of rulers. It may form a fit introduction, to the subject proposed for consideration to day, - the perpetuity of the Union of these United States. The feelings of the heart are best excited, in immediate view of the proper objects. It is by presenting the object, that the relative emotion can be distinctly and strongly called forth, and be made operative and available for good. There cannot, therefore, be a topic more timely, or better suited to the occasion that has brought us together. This is a day of Thanksgiving, not for private, individual, or family benefits, but for those that we enjoy, in common with the great mass of our fellow citizens - privileges of a more extended character and of wider diffusion. The day is designed to bring these great general blessings, in which we all alike participate, up for review, that with them may come up also, the great tie of a common brotherhood, the relative obligation of devout gratitude and thankfulness, and the evidence of a proper appreciation of them, by a course of conduct likely to secure their continuance. Private griefs and sorrows have no place in the general thankfulness. They should all pass out of view, and be forgotten. This is not the occasion, nor the day for them. It is a beautiful sight to see a whole people laying aside...
