And I join Senator Mitchell in thanking all of the leadership of the U. S. Institute of Peace. And, in addition, thanking Lee Feinstein, and Commander Bill Sanders, and also Id like to add Vince Haley. Theyve done immense work to make this possible. And I also want to commend the members of the task force. When we were first gathered together initially at Chairman Frank Wolfes recommendation. I think its been the quality of the investment by individuals on the task force that made our work possible. Finally, I want to note the importance of your committee and this hearing, on the fact Under Secretary Burns is here and I re-viewed his testimony and am very gratified by the degree which the administration is taking seriously our work. I want to, in a sense, work backward. We have a number of major conclusions, but I want to start with the one that I know you find the most per-plexing, as I did when I was in the House. And that is, what is the legislative branchs legitimate interest and how does it gain - exer-cise leverage over the executive branch in our very complicated constitutional system. I raise that because I think there are signifi-cant questions about how do we monitor and encourage the execu-tive branch to place priorities that may be different than it would reach on its own....
