The consul, who was himself a Fabius, ordered the Fabii to be present, armed, on the following day. 3. When the consul went out all his clan were standing in marching order. 4. A great crowd followed the Fabii as they went going through the city. 5. When they had reached the river Cremera, they found a suitable place for fortifying the camp. 6. When the Fabii had made everything insecure for the enemy, the Veientes attacked their camp. 7. The consul did not give the enemy room for extending their line. 8. The enemy soon repented of the peace which they had obtained. 9. The Fabii, having made many raids upon the territory of the Etruscans, also fought with them hand to hand in battle array. 10. It seemed to the Veientes that the Romans ought to be taken by an ambush. 11. The Fabii, thinking that the enemy could not withstand them, made a raid upon cattle seen at a distance. 12. Being hemmed in by the enemy, they forced their way to a hill. 13. When the Fabii were slain their camp was taken by storm. 14. Three hundred and six perished, and one boy was left. IX. 1. When the daring of the enemy had increased, they attacked the consuls army by night. 2. The horsemen announced that the camp was surrounded by the Aequi. 3. It was therefore decided that Cincinnatus should be appointed dictator....
